FIRE KILLS 10,000 QUAKE REFUGEES

Osaka, Sept. 5. (A.P.)—Approximately 10,000 refugees, fleeing from the ruins of Tokio, were burned to death in the yard of a military clothing factory in the industrial suburb of Honjo. Water and provisions are still scarce in Tokio. Three persons are sharing a single piece of bread.

HEAD HOOD FOUND IN MURDER

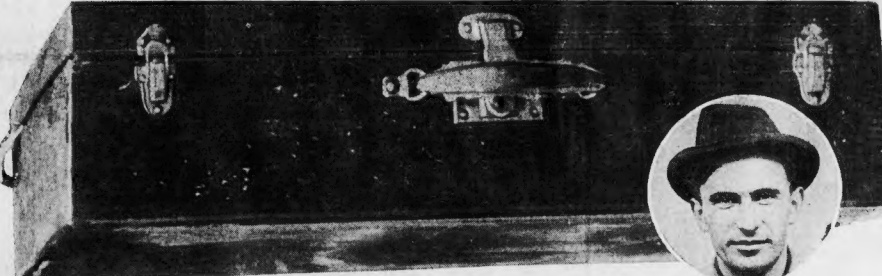

By BERT FORD

Lowell, Sept. 5.—The finding of a blood-stained hood, crudely made from strips of shaker flannel, in the water near the left bank of the Merrimack River, within the limits of this city, moved the police to greater activity in their investigation of the river murder mystery.

Captain David Perle, head of the Lowell police detective bureau, said the flannel hood may have contained the head of the unidentified young woman whose torso and legs, in

WHO RECOGNIZES THIS MURDER CLEW?

SUITCASE CONTAINING WOMAN'S TORSO AND CHIEF PELLETIER OF TYNGSBORO

Telephone the City Editor of the Boston American, Main 1180, if you recognize this suitcase as being connected with the Merrimack River murder mystery. It contained the torso of a young woman and was found in the Merrimack River at Tyngsboro. Its duplicate contained four dismembered legs. The police have been unable to find what firm made the bags or who sold them. Do you know? Have you seen a similar one under circumstances linked with the case. The suitcase is peculiar in that the handle is fastened on with rivets that are 8 ft. covered with the customary ornamental brass but are bare. It will also be noted that the corners of the case have no protective covering.

Shanghai, Sept. 5.—A wireless from the American steamer President Jefferson of the Admiral Line, direct from the harbor of Yokohama to Shanghai, stated tersely, "Yokohama has been wiped out completely." The message added, "All houses in the bluff district, the section peopled by Americans and other foreigners, were completely obliterated."

All Americans in Tokio are safe. There was a large loss of life among the Americans and other foreigners when the Grand and Oriental Hotels, built as "earthquake proof," crumbled like houses of cards in the terrific convulsions of the earth.

The military has forbidden the private burial of any person. To prevent plague, the soldiers are hastily piling up bodies in huge funeral pyres and incinerating them.

In spite of the ruthless burning of the dead an outbreak of pestilence is seriously threatening because lack of drinking water is forcing hundreds of thousands to quench their thirst with polluted river water.

Japanese Casualties Will Reach Nearly 1,000,000

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
As the story of the Japanese disaster is unfolded in the fragmentary messages from press association correspondents, Japanese newspapers and individuals, it is apparent that the magnitude of the catastrophe has not been overdrawn.

SHROUD FOUND IN SUITCASE TRAGEDY
Lowell, Sept. 5.—Blood-stained remnants of what State police suspect may have been used as a shroud to conceal the body of the young woman victim of the suitcase mystery before it was cut up were found by Henry E. Gray, a retired letter carrier of Lowell. Gray fished out the blood-stained bundle from Merrimack river about 200 yards north of Tyngsboro Bridge, while John H. Robinson, State diver was searching the river bottom for the missing head of the victim.

POLICE SHOTS FAIL TO HALT YOUTH WHO ATTACKED GIRL

Mrs. John P. O'Keefe, twenty-four-year-old Charlestown woman, was attacked on the doorstep of her home, No. 52 Rutherford Avenue, by an unidentified young man and rescued by Patrolman Edward L. Toole, who fired four shots at her assailant, early today.

The young woman, who carried the cash receipts from a pool room conducted by her blind husband, former English High School football player, was knocked down and beaten. Her eyes were blackened.

The man, who she said she had never seen before, escaped despite shots fired by Officer Toole, who had followed the girl and her assailant along Rutherford Avenue.

WHAT A DAILY PAPER PRINTS about ELCHO Cigar

"A cigarmaker talking to one of our reporters said: 'If all cigars were made from a choice Havana filler such as is used in the Elcho cigar there would be fewer strikes.' Some time ago, when the girl strippers struck, the fact was forcibly brought out that the girls in the Elcho factory earned two or three times more than girls in other factories, simply because the Elcho uses the expensive choice Havana filler."

"On account of this the Elcho is the highest priced cigar to the wholesaler of any of the so-called popular brands. At the same time the Elcho retails to the smoker at the same price as other brands."

Greatest of Disasters.
The After Effects.
Other Great Calamities.
If Men Would Learn.

—By Arthur Brisbane—
Copyright, 1923, by The Hearst Corporation.

THE JAPANESE EARTHQUAKE surprises in its horror all authenticated calamities in the world's history—apart from plagues, and war, which men bring upon themselves. The history of Japan is a history of earthquake disaster. These living remembrance one of them. In 1851, 10,000 were killed by an earthquake drowned 23,000. The disaster of the moment, made horribly dreadful by modern construction of buildings, by gas mains and their flares, unknown in the old days, surpasses all records. It is feared that half a million have perished and there is talk of one or two smaller Japanese islands having disappeared entirely beneath the sea.

MILIONS ARE HOMELESS, hungry, frightened. Fear and the nervous effect upon the survivors of the earthquake are almost as serious as the earthquake itself. Insanity follows earthquake, spinal and other troubles, and hatreds and superstitions worse than those are awakened by fear of the unknown.

THE GREATEST most deadly of all earthquakes in history is the one that occurred at Lisbon on the 1st of November, 1755.

A terrific shock in an instant reduced the city to a heap of ruins. The shock was followed by a terrific tidal wave that wrecked the shipping and drowned thousands. Earthquake, fire and water combined destroyed close to 40,000 lives and 100 hundred million dollars in property—a vast sum and a horrible calamity.

THE EARTHQUAKE, made famous by the number of well-known men that have written about it, called forth an unusually complete display of religious superstition.

Many of the English Protestant clergy based upon its solemn sermons declaring that Lisbon was destroyed because the Portuguese were Catholics.

THE PROTESTANTS did not have a monopoly of superstition. For the Catholics survivors of the earthquake decided that they had been punished for rejecting a few Protestant missionaries, and those Protestants were all promptly baptized Catholics by force.

THE WORLD AT LARGE knows now what an earthquake is. The earth, hot at the center, cool on the outside, settles VERY SLIGHTLY ON TOP as a cake just taken from the oven settles in the pan. It is almost imperceptible, taking the earth or a cake as a whole.

The earthquake represents the earth's adjustment to its environment. Sometimes, as in these Japanese earthquakes, volcanoes springing into violent life make the calamity greater.

BUT FIRE AND TIDAL WAVE, and modern building of a construction dangerous in earthquake regions, do more to destroy life than the earthquake itself.

And even when the actual loss of life is the dreadful terror, the mental suffering inflicted upon millions.

Dispatches from Tokio contain this: "Thousands of frenzied men and women, overcome with excitement and fatigue, went mad and threw themselves into the sea."

We all have a secretly or openly enthusiastic inclination to sports in our make-up. It may be limited to pitching a horse shoe at an iron peg or the intimate knowledge of modern football, with all its ramifications. All sports, with pictures, handled by New England's greatest writers and artists every day in the sport section of this newspaper.

SHE INTENDS TO 'KEEP ON MARRYING'

MRS. OLIVE WALSH
A terrific shock in an instant reduced the city to a heap of ruins. The shock was followed by a terrific tidal wave that wrecked the shipping and drowned thousands. Earthquake, fire and water combined destroyed close to 40,000 lives and 100 hundred million dollars in property—a vast sum and a horrible calamity.

OUR OWN CHRISTIAN ANCESTORS believed in strange creatures beneath the earth. The venerable Bede, illustrious for his learning, twelfth century, also, at times, such huge masses of the waves that when he believes them forth all the seas feel their effect."

THE HIBLE DOUBTFUL the actual belief in the fourth verse of the Chapter of Exodus: "Of anything that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth."

SUCH A DISASTER fills every mind with horror, and the people of this country will do all they can to help relieve the suffering. The disaster ought to have its effect in Europe. There, now, just recovering from a war, in which the loss of half a million lives was an incident, are preparing other wars and other disasters to make the loss of life and property in Japan seem trifling.

PRINCE OF WALES IS ON WAY TO CANADA
London, Sept. 5.—(U.S.A.)—Traveling in the Duke of Cornwall, the Prince of Wales departed today for Canada to visit his ranch.

He took the regular train from London, and was accompanied by three thousand men and women, overcome with excitement and fatigue, went mad and threw themselves into the sea.

League To Stay Out of Italy's Fight
Geneva, Sept. 5.—(U.S.A.)—Italy's representative, M. Salandra, told the Council of the League of Nations today that Italy would regard intervention of the league in the Greek-Italian crisis as unjustified.

After a visit from M. Peltre former Greek foreign minister, upholding the attitude of his government, the League of Nations today decided that Article 10, 12 and 15 of the Covenant of the League of Nations should be read immediately, both in French and in English, and declared that the Greek articles were to be disregarded, the whole settlement of Europe would be shaken.

RATIONAL LEAGUE STARTS BEER DRIVE
Chicago, Sept. 5.—(U.S.A.)—Workers for the National American League have begun an agitation today for prohibition of the sale of beer and light wine.

The league, a National organization, now attacking the temperance of the day law by gaining a political hold in every Congressional district.

COST $1.23 TO RAISE BUSHEL OF WHEAT

Washington, Sept. 5.—Reports compiled by the Department of Agriculture from 4,800 farmers in all parts of the country show an average production cost in 1922 for wheat of $1.23 a bushel, for corn 86 cents, and for oats 52 cents. Against these figures, the average sale price realized on the crop was $1.11 a bushel for wheat, 71 cents for corn, and 44 cents for oats.

The Cost Figures, the department said, are for the use of the

PAYS FINE IN PENNIES AND IS JAILED 5 DAYS

San Rafael, Calif., Sept. 4.—Charles Koros, a San Francisco grocer, was fined 12 for speeding in San Rafael. He mailed the fine from San Francisco in pennies tied in separate packages of 100 pennies each.

He has been held before the court for contempt and fined an additional $40 and sent to the county jail for five days, the judge figuring that he was wasting the court too cheaply by sending the original fine in pennies.

CLUBMAN SHOT BY GIRL, HE SAYS, WHEN HE BALKED AT BLACKMAIL

REFUSED TO GIVE UP $10,000

Smith Saw Man Skulking in Woods When He Was Attacked

Providence, R. I., Sept. 5.—A heavy sugar papa turned out to be a small time angel. Bing! That tells the story of the shooting of Ernest R. Smith, a dealer and rich clubman of this city, who lies wounded in a local hospital.

Mr. Smith today decided to tell the tale in the courts.

When the shooting occurred, he was in a story in which there figured a mysterious woman who, after she shot him, cried dramatically: "I've shot the wrong man."

Smith exclaimed: "I wish to this very minute when he gave me the money."

In the new version of his story, Smith says the woman in the case was Gertrude Johnson, a twenty-year-old girl of the city. He said he had known Gertrude ever since he was sixteen years old.

SAW MAN IN WOODS.

On the day of the shooting, Smith and the girl motored to Woodville in North Providence. There the girl made a demand on him for $10,000.

"Previously the girl had made demands," Smith relates, "I had given her smaller sums. But I balked when she demanded this large sum."

She told me she was going to California and had to have $10,000. I told her I wouldn't give her a dime, and she could go further than California. She left the car and started to walk into the woods.

"I saw a man skulking in the woods. As I turned to him, she drew a gun and before I could say anything, she fired."

Despite the fact that he knew the girl for four years, Smith never told the trouble to anyone where the girl lived. He gave a description of her to the police, describing her as thin, weighing about a hundred pounds.

SUSPECTED BAD GAME.

"She had been prying me for a blackmail for some time," he said, "threatening me with exposure from time to time. I believe the man walking in the woods was her husband, planted there for a 'lodge' game."

The police took a stenographic report of Smith's statement, which was made in his private room at the Isaac Brown Memorial Hospital, where he is recovering from his wounds.

GERMANS NOW SOCIETY WOMEN ADMIT LOSING SUMMONSED IN FIGHT IN RUHR PIER GAMBLING

Berlin, Sept. 5.—Germany has arrived at the end of her father as far as her further ability to finance passive resistance is concerned.

This is the current impression in banking circles which expect Germany in the course of the next few days will take the initiative in ceasing the official blockade.

That the Ruhr and the Rhineland fight has been lost is tacitly admitted in political circles. It is believed German editors have been informed by Chancellor Stresemann that the government would seek to force a solution of the Ruhr conflict in the near future.

Did She Flee Because of the Eve-Old Antipathy to Things That Crawl?

Now Psychologists Are Asking if Those Terrifying Illuminated Balustrades in the Fabulous Browning Home Are the Key to This Broken Romance.

Mrs. Nellie Adele Browning Shows That 'Eve-Old Fear of Serpents May Be Overcome.

"And the Lord God said unto the Serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all beasts, thou shalt creep upon thy belly, and thou shalt eat dust all the days of thy life."

THUS was the curse of creation laid upon the serpent and so was created the strange and terrible antipathy that goes out from the very nature of woman toward the thing that crawls.

Was it this antipathy, growing to a power overwhelming her personality and freezing her judgment that drove Mrs. Nellie Adele Lowen Browning away from her husband and foster children and out of the most spectacular home in New York City to brave the hazards and loneliness of a strange city in a foreign land?

Was it the impact, repeated many times each day through a period of eight long years, upon sensitive nerves and brain centers of the nearness of one of the deadliest creatures known to herpetologists that caused the wife of Edward W. Browning, New York millionaire, to step out of her Arabian Nights' romance into the merciless glare of question, criticism, condemnation? Perhaps some savant, skilled in the psychology of feminine inhibitions and complexes shall say one day. Perhaps deep in his heart the middle-aged husband of the youthful Mrs. Browning is giving a thought to the revelation of the snake-motif in the decoration of his astonishing home, with its twenty-four rooms and private roof gardens, rivaling in beauty and wonder even the hanging gardens of ancient Babylon, and is wondering if the Dresden china beauty he married is altogether to blame for having earned the title of the "most capricious woman in the East."

Perhaps he is beginning to understand the terror which might be struck deep into a woman's heart by the sight of phosphorescent eyes gleaming at her in the dark and red fangs seeming to dart hither and yon.

But if Browning, the man, does understand, there is no forgiveness in the heart of Browning, the husband. He sees only his home disrupted by a wife who fled to Paris with her beloved—a member of the shiny-haired, slender-waisted, pink-manicured brotherhood; the now famous "Sheik of the Desert Chair," Dr. Charles Henry Wiken. And against the wife Browning's suit for divorce still stands, while he brands "atrocious" charges she is said to have made concerning his "violent temper" and liking for "very young girls."

However stoutly a man may maintain that the story of the Garden of Eden is but a symbolic account of development of the race, it is certain that the enmity toward snakes, which has existed in the heart of woman for sixty centuries, has in no way abated, but persists in many instances as rite to a pathological phobia bordering insanity.

Many theories are offered to explain this state of the feminine mind. Perhaps the most logical is the one advanced by the strange new science which delves below consciousness and searches the dim corners of the subconscious mind to find what fear or superstition—heritage of generations of women gone—lurks there to inhibit or compel thought and conduct.

The serpent, says this science, has stood for immortality almost since time began. The ancients believed that the creature never died, but merely shed its skin year after year, emerging refreshed and always young. Therefore, goes on the supposition, the symbolic serpent in the symbolic garden where the fabled first of the race lived, signifies procreation—a thing that ever must mean terror and pain to womanhood. It easily may be understood how certain quirks of mentality or physique, whether sane or abnormal, might increase or diminish the woman's antipathy toward the crawling creature.

It is interesting to note that the Brownings had no children. Not long after their marriage Browning adopted a little girl, once Marjorie Herkin and Mrs. Browning adopted another girl, then Dorothy Lane. They now are seven and eight years old, and when the foster-mother left her home she took with her the daughter she had adopted, giving her into the custody of friends.

It was nearly eight years ago that not only New York, but the entire country, was astounded by the story of the splendors of the home and gardens the wealthy son of the late Franklin Browning, one of the founders of Browning, King & Co., was building his bride for a wedding present.

At the top of an apartment building near Central Park and overlooking the rolling grounds of the American Museum of Natural History, he leased for ten years two apartments. Immediately began the work of knocking out partitions and installing decorations and furnishings.

Prices were lifted boldly from ancient Japan and a portion of the museum room was filled by a network of piano-wire so each different in conception, but all marvelous. Gold and silver dishes were used in the dining-room and a portion of the music-room was filled by a network of piano-wire so each different in conception, but all marvelous. The incredible feature of the Browning home was the garden on the roof, with its lake big enough to permit of rowing a boat over the surface, surrounded by pergolas, gazing-boxes, marble figures, ten thousand plants in thirty-three flowerbeds and a chess set with stars that twinkled with light at night.

But the weird thing about the garden was the stairway which led to it from the drawing-room below—and the terrible thing the handrail of the stairway.

Each tread was glass, and with setting the foot upon it a colored light glowed and a note of music sounded. Each tread operated a different note and a different colored light, so something of a solo of light and sound was executed merely by running upstairs. The newest-post was a hollowed marble globe holding twisted orchids made of glass.

And twisted round this post in a manner more realistic than life itself was the tail of a boar-restrictor. The sinuous, diamond-marked body stretched upward for a hand-rail, and at the top was the hideous head, with a ruby tongue and green eyes, lighting and flashing with the opening of the door into the garden.

A terrifying conceit, the serpent, and one never to be ignored nor avoided, since the constantly used way to the garden lay up the glass stairs.

One fancies the little lady of the garden slowly approaching the stairway, shrinking against the wall opposite the menace of the rail, scurrying past the darting red tongue and the green eyes, horror winning her heart.

Was it indeed the ancient "enmity" decreed by destiny to rule her emotions that drove her away from the lofty palace of her dreams?

It must be remembered that not even in her faings abroad was Mrs. Browning free of the suggestion of the snake. For, true to his love of the original touch, Browning had specially made for his motor a horn twisted in the replica of a viper. One pressed the tail and the noise came from the capping jaws.

According to the story told by Browning, his wife first met Wiken in his dental office on Fifth Avenue when he did some bridgework for her. According to rumor, Wiken is prominent in the sordid night life of Greenwich Village, figuring among the emancipationists who make their headquarters in the dingy streets and dingier tea rooms as a fascinating woman.

The short-haired blonde of a Washington Square tea room still talks of a visit he paid to her purloin last winter in company with a "dear, pretty woman in a mink coat." He confided to his friends that she was a wealthy sweetheart he had captured.

Of Wiken's Greenwich Village night life it is understood that Mrs. Browning knew little. He carefully paid court to her, the gossip says, between bouts with his unnamed friends.

Browning states that he went down to Long Island to open his summer home there and found his wife and all her possessions gone when he returned to his uptown home. Among these possessions were $10,000 worth of jewels which he had given her. He indicated that he will take measures to cut off her income—with which he believes she is paying the expenses of the Paris trip—from a trust fund of $100,000 he settled upon her two years ago.

Meantime, despite one of the little adopted daughters, is living with Mr. Browning in his summer home on Long Island. And from the walls of the Arabian Nights' palace the serpents look down on empty rooms—perhaps with a gleam of triumph.

In my opinion, there have always been flappers and they have always flapped. Civilization may have been backward and primitive, but—

The girl with arms like a truck driver isn't alluring in one of those no sleeve get-ups.

That new trend in the summer certainly wins the prize for the red suspenders. She gives a silver, girlish laugh every time for her suspenders. Flappers may have been backward and primitive, but—

Mary K. is the slickest wonder. She has a beautiful left elbow, like Katharine, when she keeps the typewriter, ink off the same.

The advertising value of good bathing suits with plenty of zip to them for those with monumental projects in the office can scarcely be overestimated.

HOW A ACCOMPLISHMENTS FOR WOMEN COME FIRST

"My wife has no accomplishments except that she is a good wife, a good mother and a good housekeeper. I am sorry that she is not more accomplished."

This is the complaint of a married man whose home is exceptionally well kept. Thousands of married men wish they might give good wives the same compliment.

What greater accomplishment can a man wish his wife to have than that she be a good wife, good mother, and a good housekeeper?

If in addition she may be accomplished in other ways it is a blessing, but if she is capable only of "parlor tricks" and falls in the essentials, home is not going to be an ideal spot, nor will happiness abound.

When a man has a wife who measures up the three particulars mentioned, he should feel like congratulating himself.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

A United States marine, was taken captive at Chateau-Thierry during the war. He was able to speak German and made life miserable for his guards. His favorite greeting, which he worked overtime was "Well, I guess you Yankee certainly made hot for you Heines at Chateau-Thierry."

His arrogance got beyond all bearing and a sergeant complained to his commanding officer, who ordered the prisoner brought before him.

"You will have either to raise the only of allegiance to the German flag, or face the firing squad," he told the marine.

The American took the oath but a few moments later was heard chuckling softly. The commanding officer told him to state the cause of his mirth.

"It was just thinking, General," he replied. "Those Yankee certainly gave us Heines hell at Chateau-Thierry."

While attending a lawn party several weeks ago, I stood near a group of girls. A fine-looking gentleman came over and calling one of them by her first name asked for a dance. Thinking he meant me, I answered that I would like to favor him. Turning very astonished eyes on me as I said I had made a mistake, I certainly had as the girl he had asked had the same name as myself. How I wished my embarrassment that the ground had opened up and swallowed me.

My little girl, three years old, came in from play one day for something to eat. She went into the pantry and saw some peaches on the shelf and not knowing what to call them, said to me: "Please, mother, may I have an apple with some dust on it?"
